COURT FOR THE FIRST

JUDICIAL DISTRICT.

As the tug moved from the quay he whole crowd of 2,000 people present fell on their knees at a sign from the Bishop and recited prayers for the dead. Then turning in the disetion of the coffin, the Bisfiop reoffed in a loud voice: "Eternal rest give unto blm, O Lord, and let perpetual light shine upon him. May be et in peace."

The tug made her way up the river to Cork. An enormous crowd lined the quays and bridges, and when the tug swung into view around a bend in the river hundreds more passed from the side streets on to the river side. No sound escaped from the athrong as the little vessel, with flag half-masted appeared.

Grouped about, leaning on their riffen, were twenty auxiliary police. Finally, after drifting to and fro, the ing made fast at the quay by the Custom House. No effort was made to remove the body, however, and "time slipped away until an officer in charge sent for an ambulance, proposing to transfer the coffin to the City Hall, but the building was shut and the city corporation decided upon an entirely passive attitude until the relatives should reach Cork, The officer, therefore, could not carry out his plan, and later the troops were withdrawn except for a small guard left to watch over the body until the melatives should claim it.
